Pahalgam terror attack takes toll on society's mental health: Experts

MANSI BHAMBRI ■ Dehradun

The recent terrorist attack in Pahalgam, Jammu and Kashmir, has had a significant social impact on individuals, potentially affecting their mental health, the experts said. In response to the attack, many people participated in protests in Dehradun, Vikasnagar and Haridwar, among other parts of Uttarakhand, expressing their outrage by painting and displaying images of the Pakistani flag on the roads. Experts emphasised that this attack has influenced society, leading to a rise in anger, frustration and resentment among individuals.

Clinical neuropsychologist Dr Sona Koushal Gupta expressed her concerns regarding the recent attack in Kashmir. She said that this incident has had a widespread social impact, resulting in feelings of anger, frustration, hatred, anxiety and more among the people. In response, many individuals have chosen to express their outrage through rallies and protests. She advised that people should strive to remain calm and avoid resorting to violence. She stressed that any devisions and actions regarding the situation fall under the government's ambit and that individuals should focus on their own responsibilities while allowing the government to take appropriate action.

Clinical psychologist Pratibha Sharma stated that this incident has sparked widespread feelings of anger and frustration in the public. She emphasised that social media plays a crucial role in amplifying these emotions and their effects. The influence of social media has fuelled feelings of revenge, stress and other negative emotions within the community. Sharma noted that the violent reactions stemming from this incident could adversely affect the mental well-being on individuals, which may subsequently impact their physical health. She advised people to remain patient and allow the government to make decisions or take action regarding the situation. Engaging in immature actions is likely to harm both their mental health and the overall atmosphere of society.

Tiger Reserve Foundation defunct for 12 years grows alive after SIC's order

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ Dehradun

A Query to Information (RTI) by a concerned citizen not only exposed the folly of the Forest department but also revealed that the Tiger Reserve Foundation of the department was operational only on paper for the past 12 years.

Haridwar resident, Ramesh Chandra Sharma had filed an RTI query in the office of Rajaji Tiger Reserve, Haridwar range officer in which he sought information about a no objection certificate (NOC) given by the department to the Nirmal Panchayat Akhada, Haridwar. He later filed an appeal in the State Information Commission when the required information was not received by him.

Hearing the appeal, the State Information Commissioner Yogesh Bhatt sought a complete report from the Forest department. The official response revealed that the NOC was issued to the Akhada in the year 2013. The NOC mentioned that in lieu of the construction in the vicinity of RTR, the Akhada will create a green belt by planting broad leaved trees and that waterholes will be constructed for the wild animals. It also mandated scientific disposal of the organic and inorganic waste and that the Akhada will deposit a sum of Rs five lakh in the Tiger Foundation of Rajaji Reserve.

In his order, Bhatt observed that the conditions mentioned in the NOC of the Forest department have remained unfulfilled. The green belt was not made, waterholes were not constructed and no money was deposited in the tiger foundation. The construction of a wedding point was also done by the Akhada in violation of the norms.

It also came to light that the foundation was operational only on papers. When the SIC directed the department to enforce the conditions mentioned in the NOC during the course of the hearing in the Information Commission, the Forest department informed that conditions mentioned in the NOC have been fulfilled and the Akhada has deposited a sum of Rs five lakh in the foundation.
